He had been told that God had made him, - ft0 *- and the world, and everything that was in the world, and he was accustomed to say a little form of prayer to this same God every night at bedtime and every morning on rising--the servant Gerty at Hereford Square had taught him to do so, and his Muzzy had blandly approved of Gerty s religious zeal. But he had no real conception as to Whom he was addressing himself. The sweet old story, the grand story of the selfless Christ, had been told him in a sort of vague and inconsequent manner, but he had not understood it a bit. One of his petitions to Heaven, invented by Gerty, ran thus: Dear Jesus, bless father, bless mother, make me a good boy, and save my soul for Heaven, amen! But he had no sort of idea what his soul was, or why it should be so carefully saved for Heaven. What was the good of his soul? And what was Heaven? Often he thought he would ask Rattling Jack, but he hesitated to do so lest that venerable cynic should empty vials of wrath on his defenceless head for being in such a state of ignorance. And so the days went on, and he was fast becoming used to the companionship of the boy-savengers on the beech and the conversation of Rattling Jack when a sudden and glorious break...
